BRAND NEW THINGS AND MADE
TO GIVE MILADY ON CHRISTMAS

Handbags, Hose of Every Kind, Intimate Garments, Beautiful
Carryalls and Many Other Things That Will Please
Her This Yuletide.

Milady now carries an umbrella to match her gown. Not so new, you may say, until you learn that she does not own several different rain chadders, but merely has one of the latest types of frames with two or three removable covers in different colors. It takes only a minute or two to change the umbrella covering, and the idea is most practical, since it lengthens materially the life of the umbrella and makes one stunning frame for they are really good looking—do for years. If you want to give a very new Christmas gift that is sure to be appreciated, get one of these.

Clocked Hose in Wool Mixtures.
The vogue of the low shoe and the woolen stocking continues to spread. More and more women are delighting in the new-found freedom and comfort of the Oxford for all-year wear, and they are longing for some of the very new and attractive woolen hose now on display. This year's specialties are silk and wool mixtures, an excellent and wide range of colors, many kinds of lighter-weight wool hose and—best of all—lower prices. Clocked woolen stockings are a practical and useful gift, and the new dark "shoe shades" are very desirable.

Those Intimate Garments.
What woman ever had enough fresh, attractive negligees? Many a girl is longing to find a new, fresh garment in her Christmas stocking, even though she actually has some sort of a kimono and doesn't really need a new one. There are so many lovely ones in the shops now. One in particular that the expert fashion writer's fancy was a slipover model of broad satin with flowing georgette sleeves and not too long for comfort, in black. Another was a little changeable blue and gold satin breakfast coat, shell-trimmed, with pockets that came in several colors and was just the most comfortable thing possible to slip on for a hasty meal before getting fully dressed. And in the creases there were also many styles from which to choose.

The Newest Handbags.
Sterling silver tops on velvet bags, the velvet being beautifully designed in dots, checks and various patterns, have recently arrived in one good shop for Christmas. The frames are finished in Dutch silver designs, and have silver chain handles. No woman can help wanting one, and they're delightfully new and up-to-the-minute.

For the Up-to-Date Lady.
Snickers are undoubtedly gaining in favor and necessitating the ownership of bloomers as well as pantsuits. Long dark bloomers, to wear under serge dresses or with the new short suits, are more in favor, therefore, than ever, and there are many materials and prices from which to choose.

The Beautified Carryall.
Bags are sure to be appreciated, for they are varied in appearance and use.

There are the usual varieties in telephone—shoe bags, laundry bags, which button across the bottom for convenience in emptying, stocking bags, individual evening slipper bags. Then there are the fancy work bags and vanity bags of silk. You must hear about one small new vanity bag. It has a corded silk handle and is fashioned as a basket, with the handle mirror on the bottom and is trimmed with silk flowers in pastel shades.

Of course there are the usual varieties of shopping bags, with the addition of one new waterproof one, which is equipped on one side with a small purse.

For the fancy bead bags, there are more this year than ever. One shop is offering an unusual assortment of imported bead bags.

These designs are artistic and carefully worked out. Those with foreign-made silver frames are more expensive.

One new variety this year is imported from Italy, of drawingstring variety, and about twelve inches long, eight inches wide and so soft and dainty. It is handy, too, for one can easily see to the depths of the bags with less wide openings.

There are perfectly dainty little mesh bags for the kiddies.

The mesh bags in silver and gold with the single strap and jeweled clasp are irresistibly beautiful.

Jeweled metal beads appear more and more on bags. The wooden

Colorful French Jewelry

Jade and coral and blue and shell pink—or red and black and orange and amber—it doesn't matter what your preference is, you can find a generous sample of any shade or style of ornament in the cases of gaudy and giddy French jewelry displayed this season. If you want a set of earrings for a new dinner dress, there you will find them at varying prices; if you want a gay rope of beads for some one's street costume, there they are awaiting your scrutiny; if you want a new pin for a winter turban, you will find many shapes and many kinds of color combinations. Whatever is your wish—just so long as it is for a flare and stunning ornament—there are wide fields of choice.

Necklaces.
Jade is the popular color and in necklaces your imagination can go as far as it likes and find the true expression of your idea for some one's gift. There are the plain rounded beads, of course; they are often the distributors of the accentuated style note. And there are the fancy ornament kind that swing an elaborately designed plaque from an intricately woven chain. Silver and gold and many kinds of metal fill in the gaps and join head to head with sparkling effect. Other necklaces include the long, heavy beaded ropes which hang far below the waistline and whose beads are about the size of a Belgian grape, as well as the thin beaded, also long ones which alternate color with black.

Novelties.
Some are of jade and some are of lapis; some of silver and some of gold. They take the place of honor on arm or throat or finger, in the shape of small animals, oddly shaped beads and carved pendants. They are hung, too, from the brim of a hat as so many have been seen this season, and give a bright speck of color to the duller material.

Newest of all the importations are modeled flowers set on pins, hat drops, brooches, earrings and bracelets. They are colored as the roses buds from which they have been copied, and the petals are beautifully wrought, presenting a very miniature bit of nature's own ideas in decoration. Interesting, indeed, and most charmingly young-looking.

Earrings.
These are of two distinct types, the long, drooping pendants and the wheeled series. Black and jade are the prevailing preferences in the drops; usually they are fastened with silver at the top and some of them have small auxiliary chains with metal disk clasps.

their individual ornaments dangling from the main joining near the ear. The hoops are sometimes single, sometimes double, sometimes triple. New and effective are amber-colored rings, three to an earring, which are transparent and would greatly enhance the beauty of some one's fair hair. Others are studded with seed pearls and still others have triangular drops—only these latter are more exacting to wear.

Beaded Tassels.
Tassels often form the most striking part of the necklace. On a string of brilliant scarlet beads, for instance, the jeweler hangs a jet tassel which flaps its skirts as the wearer moves and draws attention to the beauty of color and line which it terminates. Others are of transparent crystal, attached to chains of black or opaque beads. They are made of straight or fancy bead strings and are so sturdily put up that they do not threaten a shower of broken beauty at any time. They would suit best the tall, graceful figure and are so tastefully made that a gift of them would be most welcome to any woman of fastidious taste.

"Gifts That Last" GIFTS THAT PLEASE "HER" and "HIM"

From our vast and carefully chosen stock every member of the family may find the desired gift here. Here, too, is an organization that prides itself in its counsel and service, which is truly inviting at this season of the year.

And remember the inevitable question: "Where did you get it?"

QUALITY is often invisible to the average eye; for, like two railway tickets, both may look identically alike, but one may take you three or four times farther than the other.

Since 1885 people of Richmond have known that "What We Say It Is, IT IS."
